

Meghan Cassidy

Title: Senior Vice President,
Chief Human Resources
Officer

Professional Background

Meghan Cassidy is Senior Vice President, Chief Human Resources Officer of Corteva Agriscience™.

Cassidy has over twenty years of experience in a wide array of HR leadership roles, across diverse industries. Throughout her career, Cassidy has transformed HR organizations to better enable the business strategy.

Her early career was spent in progressive HR roles in the hospitality industry with ARAMARK Corporation. Cassidy's roles with ARAMARK included both business-facing HR partner roles as well as enterprise-wide roles in compensation & benefits and talent & executive development. Cassidy also led several enterprise-wide diversity & inclusion initiatives. Her most recent role with ARAMARK was Vice President and Executive of Development and Corporate Human Resources.

In 2015, Cassidy joined DuPont as Director of Global Talent Management and Leadership Development. During a time of significant change for the company, Cassidy transformed DuPont's approach to talent management and leadership development. Cassidy also led all organization design and talent selection activities on behalf of DuPont for the DowDuPont merger.

In 2017, Cassidy was named Head of HR for Corteva while also maintaining an HR leadership role for DuPont. Cassidy and her team built the HR strategy for Corteva and prepared the organization to successfully spin as a stand-alone public company.

Cassidy holds an MBA in Business from Saint Joseph's University and a bachelor's degree in Business Administration from Shippensburg University.
