

Greg Friedman

Title: Executive Vice President, Chief Financial Officer

Professional Background

Greg Friedman is Executive Vice President, Chief Financial Officer of Corteva Agriscience™. Prior to this appointment, Friedman served as the Vice President of Investor Relations for DuPont and currently leads the finance organization for the Agriculture Division of DowDuPont.

Friedman has worked with company's leadership since the close of the DowDuPont merger to instill a disciplined culture focused on accelerating cost competitiveness and growth. This has included establishing a capital structure for the future company reflective of its commitment to shareholder value, as well as strengthening an approach to innovation investment that prioritizes returns and maximizes productivity for the business and its customers.

Friedman joined DuPont in 2001 as Chief Financial Officer of an electronics joint venture. Since this time and throughout his nearly 30-year career, he has supported and led business growth through a variety of divisional and enterprise finance roles. His background spans a number of consumer-focused industry sectors, and has included more than a decade in Agriculture. In DuPont, Friedman has led financial risk management and cash operations as Assistant Treasurer, served as Chief Financial Officer of DuPont Pioneer, and – prior to his appointment to Vice President Investor Relations – served as DuPont General Auditor and Chief Ethics & Compliance Leader.

Friedman earned an MBA from the Anderson School of Management at the University of California, Los Angeles, a Bachelor of Science in Accounting from the University of Southern California and is a certified public accountant (inactive).
